

Maths- Marcel Fuks

I am proud of this work because Marcel has demonstrated several different methods, including using the inverse, for answering this question. He has presented them in a way that is clear and shows his understanding well.

Literacy- Anaya Basharat

For this non-chronological report, Anaya took inspiration from her favourite author, Terry Dreary. As well as using the skills we have been studying in class, Anaya has included features of Terry Dreary's work, making this a funny and informative piece of writing.

Warriors and Weapons

Introduction:

History will always be gruesome. Like, the Iron Age for instance. It was full of brutal, blood-thirsty warriors with protective oval shaped shields. The Iron Age was fascinated by modern people for their gory stories. In this report, you will find out about gut-slashing warriors with fearsome and furious appearances, pierced, bloody weaponry which was used for slaughtering enemies, for example the Romans. They were the Celts arch-nemesis. We are actually supposed to be talking about the Celts, so let's move on. Back to the gore! The best thing you will learn about is that you will learn about a blood-thirsty warrior, who could have got poisoned or killed by a Roman but we will never know the real answer for sure. You'll find out more in the second to last paragraph. If I'm excited, I may put it in the second or third because this is the first paragraph. Read and enjoy!
